Re: The Coordinating Center Models Project (CCMP)

The purpose of this note is simply to inform those interested that we have posted the first report from the CCMP to trialsmeinerts.way (under the tab "Historical archive").

The CCMP was a three-year project (1976 - 1979) funded by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute for the purpose of studying coordinating centers of large-multicenter trials with the aim of establishing guidelines and standards for coordinating centers.

A series of reports were produced over the life of the project. The report posted details the design and methods of the project. Other reports will be posted in the weeks ahead.
